SAN FRANCISCO--Burkland, a full-service fractional CFO, HR, accounting, and tax provider, has launched a new dedicated team and suite of services specially designed to meet the needs of startups in healthcare. An expert group of Burkland financial professionals is helping these newly founded companies grow, with guidance tailored to their industry needs and requirements.

“Burkland’s finance and accounting teams have been instrumental in the growth of Inflammatrix,” said Jonathan Romanowsky, Co-Founder of Inflammatrix. “From strategy conversations to tactical execution, the Burkland team was thoughtful, accurate and responsive. Their work supported numerous initiatives, including our fundraising efforts, helping Inflammatrix to grow as we have.”

Burkland’s Healthcare CFOs, bookkeepers, and tax advisors help guide healthcare startups through market research, regulatory clearance and compliance, capital sourcing from healthcare-focused VCs and government grants, reimbursement structures, and Friendly PC, Management Services Organization (MSO), and Administrative Services Organization (ASO) entity setup.

“Healthcare startups have specialized needs and face regulatory requirements unique to their industry,” said Walt Spevak, Managing Director of Burkland’s Healthcare Group. “For founders in life sciences, biotech, pharma, medical devices, digital health, and telemedicine, it’s critical to have expertise that spans the value chain with a deep understanding of current and evolving regulations.”

Burkland services for healthcare include regulatory approval process and reporting, financial modeling and scenario analysis, and venture capital raises and debt financings. Fractional CFOs can assist in tracking working capital and cash flow management, as well as contracts, payment, and reimbursements. In addition, Burkland also offers targeted People Operations services for healthcare startups, including HIPAA compliance and strategies for recruiting, retention, and employee engagement.
